A LARGE AND COMPLETE CONCORDANCE TO THE BIBLE IN ENGLISH,

According to the laſt Tranſlation.

Firſt collected by Clement Cotton, and now much enlarged and amended for the good both of Schollers and others: far exceeding the moſt perfect that ever was extant in our Language, both in ground-work and building,

By Samuel Nevvman, a poor labourer
in the Lords vineyard.

The manifold uſe and benefit of this work is ſufficiently declared in the Prefaces to the Reader.

An Advertiſement to the Chriſtian READER, concerning the occaſion of compoſing and publiſhing this CONCORDANCE, together with the manifold uſe thereof.

Such is the excellencie of Scripture-learning, which containeth in it florem delibatum, the flower and very quinteſcence of ſoul-ſaving wiſdome that we may ſay of it as the [a] Philoſopher ſometimes ſpake concerning the knowledge of the ſoul of man; A ſmall and dim knowledge of it is to be valued far above a greater meaſure of cleerer inſight in any other ſcience. For the inſpired Scripture is the infallible rule of faith, the unmoveable ground of hope, the perfect guide of life, the ſoules ſtore-houſe of proviſion, the ſpirituall arſenall of munition, the ſacred jewell of devotion, the divine ſubject of contemplation, the everlaſting ſpring of celeſtiall conſolation. The canonicall books of the old and new Teſtament are exact maps of the heavenly Canaan, drawn by the penſill of the holy Ghoſt, the authenticall records of the Church, the deeds of almighty God, and evidences of mans ſalvation. In the peruſall whereof, they who take not exceeding great delight and contentment, are (it is to be feared) either wholly earthly, and mind not heaven, or have little or no aſſurance of any legacie bequeathed to themſelves therein. But the children of promiſe, who will not forgoe their hope of heaven for all that the earth can afford, are never ſatisfied in reading over and over day and night, the ſeverall Chapters of the holy Bible, which are as ſo many codicils, by which their heavenly Father allotteth and aſſigneth to them much treaſure of grace for the preſent, and ſeverall crownes of glory to every one of them in his celeſtiall kingdome hereafter. In which regard they claime them as their [b] heritage for ever; they eſteem them above gold, yea, much fine [c] gold: and therefore Saint [d] Jerome, in a letter hee wrote to an elect Lady, calleth them her casket of jewels: Let theſe jewels, ſaith hee, alwayes hang upon thy neck, and at thy ears. They are alſo ſweeter to their taſte than the honey and the honey comb: And therefore devout [e] Auguſtine termeth them his march-pane, or ſweeteſt banquetting diſhes, ſaying, Let thy Scriptures be my delicacies, let me never be deceived in them, nor deceive by them. With knowledge of theſe alone, we may, and by ordering our life accordingly, ſhall go to heaven: but with all other learning wee may, and without this, ſhall certainly poſt to the pit of deſtruction: and what will it avail a man to be exquiſitely learned in all other things, and to be groſſely ignorant in that one thing, which is [f] neceſſary? What will it boot a man to be wiſe to perdition, and to go to hell by [g] book? In vain is it to ſpill ſo much precious time as moſt men doe upon vile pamphlets, curious arts, profane ſtories, and laſcivious poems: whereas they ſhould ſequeſter (if God were in all their thoughts) all their ſpare time from the neceſſary duties of their calling, to the reading, hearing, and meditating upon the word which through the Spirit of grace, and their devout prayers, will enlighten their underſtanding with the knowledge of God, and enflame their affections with the love of God, & eſtabliſh their hearts with the promiſes of God, and moderate their joyes with the feare of God, and mitigate their afflictions with the comforts of God, and regulate all their thoughts, words and deeds with the precepts of God. Why delve they continually in humane arts and ſecular ſciences, full of dregs and droſſe? why do they not rather dig into the mines of the gold of Ophyr, where every line is a vein of precious truth, every page leaſe gold? In other books ſome truth is taught, ſome good commended, ſome kind or part of happineſſe promiſed: but in the inſpired oracles of God, all truth is taught, all goodneſſe commanded, all happineſſe promiſed; nay, wee may invert the words with Hugo de ſancto victore, and ſay. Quicquid ibi docetur eſt veritas, quicquid precipitur bonitas. quicquid promittitur felicitas: All that is there taught is truth, all that is there commanded is goodneſſe, all that is there promiſed is happineſſe.

Now if ſuch be the neceſſity and excellencie of ſaving knowledge compriſed intirely in holy Scriptures, queſtionleſſe, of all pious labours, we are moſt to bleſſe God for theirs, whereby theſe writings of God may be made more cleer, eaſie, readie, and familiar unto us: For the beſt of all helps are helps in the beſt things.

In which kind, all that are not ſtrangers to ſacred ſtories, accord that Concordances are of more ſoliditie, then luſtre; uſe, then ſhew. As [h] the goodly tops of trees are in the eyes of all, but not the roots out of which they grow; and the beautifull fore-fronts of great palaces, but not the foundations which ſupport them; and the gorgeous garments of cloth of gold, and tiſſue richly embroidered with variety of works and and flowers, but not the skeynes of ſilk, and gold thred, of which yet they are made; ſo it cannot be denied, but thoſe exquiſite expoſitions of Scripture, diſcourſes upon Scripture, and deductions from Scripture, which draw all mens eyes unto them with admiration, are not a little indebted for their materials to Concordances, or ſuch like helps of ſtudies. For though, by frequent reading of holy Scriptures a man may imprint in his mind the principall heads of doctrine, together with the courſe of hiſtory, and moſt remarkable phraſes through the whole Bible: yet who ever charged his memory with every particular paſſage, every word, with the ſeverall repetitions & acceptions thereof [i] in Scripture? whereof notwithſtanding our skilfull Bezaleels, who deal with the cutting and ſetting in gold the diamonds of the divine Word, make ſpeciall uſe: as [k] Saint Chryſoſtome illuſtrateth it by the example of finers of gold and ſilver, who meddle not only with wedges, ingots, and maſſie pieces of gold; but with the ſmalleſt foil or ray the mettall caſteth.

Were that the only, which is the moſt uſuall employment of a Concordance, to ſerve as a remembrancer to help us out when we ſtick at a quotation, and by retaining one word, as it were laying hold on a clod to recover the whole tract or plat of holy ground; the immenſe labours of the pious Compiler of this work deſerved to be thankfully remembred by us, for thus ſteading our memory: But the uſe of his work extendeth not only to the helping of that faculty. They who exerciſe their invention in dilating upon any ſacred ſubject, or their judgment in diſcerning the naturall and proper ſenſe of Scripture, ſhall find this book ready at hand to furniſh them with that they deſire, either for clearing the text in moſt places, or proofe of any point of doctrine neceſſary to ſalvation. For the ſeverall words and phraſes in holy Writ are like thoſe [l] pictures of ſilver ſpoken of in the Proverbs, in which apples of gold were incloſed: and conſequently, the frame of this Concordance, exhibiting to our eye all the pictures of ſilver in their ſeverall places, ſheweth us alſo where wee may with eaſe take out the apples of gold. To explain this a little to ſuch as are either utterly unacquainted with collections of this nature, or caſt an eye of ſcorn upon them (and yet none make more uſe in ſecret of them then they;) if in their reading the Bible, they fall upon ſome perplexed ſentence and obſcure place, let them, according to the direction of Saint [m] Auguſtine, ſeek for other parallell texts or places of Scripture, in which the ſame matter is ſet down more plainly and evidently. For as the Sun is beſt deſcried by his own beams; ſo the Scripture is beſt expounded by Scripture. But if they cannot meet with any parallell ſentence, let them then ſingle out that word or words, the ambiguity whereof cauſeth obſcuritie in the ſentence. This word or words let them ſearch in their Concordance, and obſerve in each place where they read it the ſeverall ſignifications thereof, and among them, let them make choice of that, which upon due examination they find beſt agreeth with the analogie of faith, the ſcope of the place, and circumſtances of the text. Again, if their thoughts fix upon any ſimple theme (as the Logicians call it) and they deſire in their meditation to proſecute it through all the topicks, and in their way knock at all the doors of arguments, definition, diviſion, parts, cauſes, effects, ſubjects, adjuncts, oppoſites; they ſhall need but to trace the word with the Synonima's in their Concordance, and they cannot miſſe of what may be found in Scripture for their purpoſe. Or if in their method they would handle thema complexum, or compoſitum (which in the underſtanding is a compoſition, but in ſpeech a propoſition,) let them but reſolve the propoſition into the ſimple terms of which it conſiſteth, and, as the Concordance pointeth, turn to thoſe texts in the Bible, in which thoſe ſimplices termini, or equivalent, occurre; ſo they ſhall ſoon gather what the treaſurie of Gods Word yeeldeth either for the explication, confirmation, or application of that doctrinall principle or concluſion. Thus may they make their Concordance a nurſery garden to ſtore them with choice plants and flowers of Paradiſe, I mean, divine allegations. In regard of which profit, or rather neceſſity of Concordances, wee read that Origen, who wrote the firſt Commentarie upon holy Scripture, made alſo the firſt Concordance in Greek (though ſomewhat of another nature, and with much more toyl, becauſe out of many tranſlations:) Since his time many have aſſayed a work ſemblable thereunto in Latin. But Henricus Stephanus his Maſter-piece, as it were to make good his name, like that Oration of Demoſthenes de Corona, carrieth away the garland from them all.

I foreſee what ignorance or malevolence may object againſt this work; that our preſſes are over-preſt with Engliſh books already, what need we then to put them to more torture, and make them groan under ſo heavie a bulk as this is in Engliſh? [n] Quis leget hæc? min' tu iſtud ais? nemo hercule, nemo? vel duo, vel nemo. For whom is this work? Schollers can have recourſe to Concordances in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. And the illiterate as little need this work, as they can make uſe of it. To this objection, the diligent compoſer hereof might anſwer as Lucilius in Tully, [o] that he wrote not his books for the moſt learned, or for the moſt unlearned, but for the middle ſort. They were not for the firſt ſort, and the later were not for them. The former were too ſharp-ſighted, and could ſpie the ſmalleſt errours; the later were too dull and ſhort-ſighted, they could not ſee that which was good in them. The one would not ſtoop ſo low, and the other could not reach ſo high.

But I dare undertake, if they will indifferently, and with ingenuitie conſider of this work, the Authour may deſervedly expect thanks of all ſorts, and they reap benefit by him. To begin at the lower end: there is none that can read Engliſh but may help himſelf by this Concordance, to perfect his ſacred collections or divine notes, and readily thereby find any place of Scripture whereof he remembreth any word, having forgot the quotation. For example; if hee remember that hee hath read or heard this phraſe in one of the Prophets, He will caſt all their ſins into the depths of the ſea, & deſireth to find it, that he may meditate upon the place for his further comfort; let him take this book, and ſearch the words Sea, and Depths, and Sins, and over-paſſing the books of Moſes, Chronicles, Pſalms, &c. follow the words in the Prophets, where, at Micah chap. 7. v. 19. he ſhall meet with what he ſeeks for. Likewiſe, if any clauſe or broken paſſage out of the Evangeliſts or Apoſtles run in his mind, let him cull out the principall word which he retaineth in his memory, (the other having ſlipped him) and let him confine his ſearch in the Concordance to the Goſpels or Epiſtles, and with great facility he will light upon the whole ſentence ſentence deſired by him. By the manifold allegations in the New Teſtament out of the Old, and declarations of them, and alluſions unto them, he may much confirme his faith in the harmony of Scripture, and conſent of the New Teſtament with the Old: as alſo by the frequent repetition of the ſame doctrines, and often inculcating the ſame duties (ſometimes in the ſame words) in Scripture, he may learne both to bewaile our naturall forgetfulneſſe of thoſe things that moſt concern us, and take more ſpeciall notice of the moſt neceſſary doctrines of faith, and directions for our life.

Now let me aſcend higher, and crave leave to informe or remember the learned, that they have alſo their ſhare, at leaſt in ſome part, of the crop of this harveſt. For though they be well acquainted with the Concordances and tranſlations in the learned languages; yet their mother tongue, in which they heare the Scriptures perpetually read both publickly and privately, cannot but be more ready to them, and freſh in their memory. Neither will the Concordances in the learned languages give them that ſatisfaction they expect; for, as [p] Reuchlin ſpake of the languages themſelves; The Hebrewes drink out of ſprings, the Greeks out of the rivers, and the Latins of fens: ſo thoſe which make uſe of the Hebrew Concordance of the Old Teſtament, are like thoſe, who drink water out of a moſt pure fountaine; thoſe which uſe the Greek, according to the Septuagints tranſlation, or any other, are like thoſe who drink out of rivers, in ſome places muddy, in others brackiſh, yet for the moſt part not unwholeſome: But they who uſe the Latin vulgar, are like thoſe that drink out of fens, or over flown marſhes, in which the water is every where foule, and in many places unwholeſome and infectious. And therefore, albeit the [q] Trent Conventicle hath Canonized that tranſlation, and Anathematized all ſuch as upon any pretext whatſoever reject it: yet the learned, even among the Jeſuites, in their Commentaries familiarly leave it, though with reſpective language, and upon faire termes.

And as Pope [r] Leo the tenth, before that Synod, ſet Sanctes Pagninus on work to tranſlate the whole Bible anew out of the Hebrew, and allowed Eraſmus tranſlation of the New, often interfearing with the vulgar; ſo Pope Clement the Eighth, ſince that Councell, made bold to correct the edition of Sixtus his predeceſſor, in more then [ſ] a thouſand places: and yet he himſelf hath left large gleanings for them that ſhall follow him in the like animadverſions. The truth whereof is ſo evident and undeniable, that the Publiſher of the Concordance made according to this vulgar tranſlation, Anno 1600. in his Preface, complaineth that he wrote after a bad copy. The [t] old Interpreter, ſaith he, ſeemeth rather to follow the ſenſe then the words, and oftentimes departs from both, as it clearly appeares by comparing it with the Latin tranſlations of Pagnine, Arius Montanus, and other moſt learned Interpreters, and with the Hebrew and Greek Originals.

And that thou mayeſt yet (Chriſtian Reader) more clearely diſcerne how the waters of life are corrupted by running through the foule channell of this vulgar Latin tranſlation, I will inſtance in ſome few places, among very many other: The firſt, Gen. 3. 15. we read in the vulgar, Ipſa conteret caput tuum, She ſhall bruiſe thy head; whereas it ſhould be, according to the Originall, It ſhall bruiſe thy head: A falſe and erroneous tranſlation, corrupting the text, and attributing that to the Virgin Mary, which is the proper work of her Son, our Saviour, namely to deſtroy the Divell and his workes; which is meant by bruiſing the head of the Serpent. Secondly, we read, Epheſ. 5. 32. Hoc eſt magnum ſacramentum, This is a great ſacrament, (whereas it ſhould be according to the Originall, This is a great myſterie.) A falſe and erroneous tranſlation, corrupting the text; yet commonly alledged by our adverſaries, to prove Marriage to be a ſacrament of the New Teſtament: whereas the Apoſtle ſpeaketh nothing of a ſacrament, but of a great myſterie, and that not concerning a Man and his Wife, but Chriſt and the Church; but I ſpeake, ſaith he, concerning Chriſt and the Church. Thirdly, we read in Heb. 13. 16. Talibus hoſtiis promeretur Deus, With ſuch ſacrifices God is merited. (whereas it ſhould be according to the Originall, With ſuch ſacrifices, (to wit almes-deeds,) God is well pleaſed.) A falſe and erroneous tranſlation, corrupting the text, and aſcribing merit to mens works, contrary to the Doctrine of Scripture. See yet farther how thick and muddy this tranſlation is in ſome places, rendering a ſenſe far different from the Originall, in ſome a contrary, in ſome non-ſenſe. In the firſt to the Romanes, verſe 32. we read according to the Originall, Who knowing the judgement of God, that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of death: but in the vulgar Latin it is, Non intellexerunt quoniam qui talia agunt, digni ſunt morte: That is, Who underſtood not that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of death. If the Canon law ſaith truly, Maledicta gloſſa quæ corrumpit contextum. That it is a curſed gloſſe which corrupteth the text; certainly it is a curſed tranſlation which directly contradicteth the text. I confeſſe there are not many ſuch groſſe contradictions to the text, but yet very many aberrations from the ſenſe, whereby the Reader is exceedingly abuſed and miſled. As for example, where we read, according to the Originall, Pſalme 2. 12. Kiſſe the Son, it is in that tranſlation, Apprehend diſcipline, Apprehendite diſciplinam; now what affinity hath apprehending with kiſſing, and diſcipline with ſon? If a man were to prove againſt a Socinian, that Chriſt is the Son of God, and not ψιλοὶ ἀνθρωποὶ, and mere Son of Mary, this text in the Originall will afford a good argument; for here he is called the Son many hundred yeers before he was conceived in the Virgins womb: but if we adhere to the vulgar tranſlation, Apprehend diſcipline, no ſuch thing can be gathered from thence. Likewiſe, where we read, Pſal. 68. ver. 27. according to the Originall, There is Benjamin with their ruler; it is in the vulgar Latin, Benjamin in mentis exceſſu, Benjamin in an extaſie, or out of his wits; for which tranſlation there is ſo little ground either in the text, or in any thing that is written of that tribe, that a man might well queſtion whether the Interpreter were well in his wits, who faſteneth ſuch a ſtrange ſenſe upon the text. What ſhould I inſiſt upon thoſe places in which the Tranſlatour in ſtead of rendering the true ſenſe of the Hebrew, makes Non-ſenſe in the Latin? As Joel 2. 13. Multæ miſericordiæ & præſtabilis ſuper malitiâ, (for quem pœnitet mali.) And Pſal. 37. 7. Quoniam lumbi mei impleti ſunt illuſionibus, That is, Becauſe my loines are filled with mockings. How can the loines be filled with mockings or deriſions, whereas, according to the Hebrew, the words ſhould have been rendered thus, My loines are filled with a loathſome diſeaſe? But above all, thoſe two verſes in the 68. Pſalme according to our computation; but according to theirs the 67. are a perfect riddle, Verſe 12, 13.

riddle, which no Dedalus yet was able to read, and make any tollerable conſtruction of. Thoſe two verſes in the vulgar tranſlation are thus rendered, Rex virtutum, dilecti dilecti, & ſpeciei domus dividere ſpolia. Si dormiatis inter medios cleros pennæ columbæ deargentatæ, & poſteriora dorſi ejus in pallore auri. That is, The King of vertues, they beloved, or of the beloved, and of or to the ſhape or forme of the houſe, to divide the ſpoils. If you ſleep between two lots, the feathers of a dove ſilvered over, and the hinder parts of her back in the paleneſſe of gold. In this thickeſt and muddieſt paſſage, in which no Lincius can ſee any bottome, the Originall is very cleare, which the kings Tranſlatours thus render. Kings of armies did flee did flee, and ſhe that tarried at home divided the ſpoile: Though ye have lyen among the pots, yet ſhall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with ſilver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

Here let not any imagine, that in thus laying open the nakedneſſe of this vulgar Latin, I diſgrace S. Jerom, whoſe name this tranſlation beareth; for ſince his putting forth this verſion (if ever it were his, and not rather an Olla podrida of many corrupt Latin tranſlations, ſome made by Orthodox Divines, and ſome by Heretikes) it hath been ſo altered almoſt in every Chapter, that it no more deſerveth to be called his, then that famous weather-beaten Bark of Athens, to be called Theſeus his ſhip, which indeed at firſt was built by him, but in proceſſe of yeers was ſo often repaired and rigged, that it had never a plank the ſame remaining which it had at the firſt.

Navis Theſei.

The innumerable corruptions in this Latin vulgar, with additions to the Hebrew, noted in Stephanus his edition, Anno, 1532. by Obelisks; and detractions from the Hebrew, noted by Aſterisks, were a principall motive to me to encourage the Author of this Concordance to proceed in perfecting this his work; that in ſtead of a Concordance moſt in uſe, collected out of a moſt corrupt tranſlation, we might by his unwearied paines have a complete one out of the moſt pure. I ſay, now a complete one, for whatſoever was wanting in M. Cotton's, is now abundantly ſupplied in this of M. Samuel Newman. In M. Cottons, Firſt, there were many Originall words wanting, which are found in this of M. Newmans. Secondly, there are very many quotations of Scripture upon ſeverall words miſſing in the former, which are added in this. Thirdly, the allegations of Scripture text in M. Cottons, were imperfect and broken ſentences in this they are perfect and carry a full ſenſe. Fourthly, the ſeverall ſenſes of the ſame phraſe which were lacking in the former, are ſupplied in this: For example, Bleſſe, God being agent, Bleſſe God being the object: Bleſſe, as man, agent and object. Fifthly, the conjunction of words with other words, Subſtantives, Adjectives, Pronounes or Prepoſitions, which were omitted in the former, are here Alphabetically ſet downe. As for example, At the word Aaron, For Aaron, Of Aaron, To Aaron, Upon Aaron, Aaron joyned with Moſes, &c. And upon the word Brethren, His Brethren, Men and Brethren, My Brethren, Our Brethren, Their Brethren, Thy Brethren, Your Brethren, &c. Since this worke was firſt undertaken by M. Cotton, I confeſſe I underſtood of two other Concordances, the one in Engliſh by M. John Marbeck, dedicated to King Edward the ſixth; the other in Latin, fitted to Tremelius and Junius tranſlation, but neither gave me full ſatisfaction. That of M^{r}. Marbeck is very imperfect, pointing to Chapters, but not to Verſes. That out of Tremelius is appropriated to one edition, and cannot be very uſefull to thoſe who have not that edition, in regard of the exceeding great variety which may be obſerved in the ſeverall editions by Junius, ſtill endeavouring to better his former tranſlations. Howſoever, that Concordance is onely for thoſe who have attained to a good meaſure of knowledge in the Latin tongue, and that tranſlation is onely uſed by Schollars in their ſtudies; whereas the tranſlation out of which this Engliſh is gathered, is publickly read in Churches, and in all families. And as Junius his tranſlation had the advantage of all former, from whom it borrowed light, ſo this for the ſame reaſon hath the advantage of Junius his tranſlation, and is undoubtedly the moſt correct tranſlation extant. The Tranſlatours were many, and very eminent in their faculty; the time they ſpent in it was much, and their care and diligence extraordinary. To ſpeak nothing of the living, whoſe vertues may be in the eye of [u] Envie, and therefore, their commendation ſubject to the tongue of detraction: I can upon my own knowledge teſtifie of the deceaſed Pherix of our Univerſity & Colledge, Doctor Reynolds his induſtry, who followed that pious work with that intention of ſpirit and vigilance, that he thereby much impaired his ſtrength, and neer the end of it ended his dayes; and in the tranſlation of the Book of life, was himſelfe tranſlated to a better life: to which, He who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life, bring all thoſe who love the way of truth in ſincerity.

TO THE READER,

CONCERNING THE BENEFIT OF this CONCORDANCE above all others.

Chriſtian Reader,

WHat at once, in the firſt onſet on a buſineſſe, cannot be to the full accompliſhed, in time, by many aſſaies, and returnes, may be brought to a good degree of perfection. ROME (the faireſt monument of the world) was not built on a day. Time is ſaid to be The father of all things, in that by it all things are produced to their maturity. It is alſo ſaid to be The wiſeſt of all things, in that it diſcovers errours, defects, and imperfections, to redreſſe, ſupply, and perfect the ſame. This might be exemplified in all living creatures, in all manner of Edificies, in all ſorts of Arts and Sciences, in all kinds of Bookes and Treatiſes, and in all things that man undertaketh: For while here wee live, all the powers of our ſoule, and the ſeverall endowments thereof are but in part; We know in part. But prudent and diligent men by their own induſtry, and help of others, uſe to increaſe in Knowledge; as many things, at firſt very ſlenderly begun, doe in time come to be much poliſhed, if not perfected. Mens owne after-thoughts uſe to be the wiſer and better; eſpecially upon a ſerious and induſtrious review of their former paines: And they who treat upon a Subject whereon others have treated before them, uſe to be more full then the former. The latter commonly adde to the former: And well may they ſo doe (if at leaſt they be men of any parts) becauſe they have the help of the others paines. A Dwarfe, if hee ſit upon the head of a Gyant, may eaſily reach higher then the Gyant, for hee hath the advantage of the Gyants height. Hence this Proverb, The latter, the better. An inſtance whereof may be this Concordance, here preſented to thee: for in many reſpects it farre excells all Engliſh Concordances that have heretofore been publiſhed. That I may not be thought on any by-reſpect, without juſt ground, to avouch this, give me leave, firſt in generall to put you in mind of the benefit of Concordances, and then in particular to demonſtrate wherein this is to be preferred before others.

δευτέρων ἀμεινόνων. Græc. Parœm.

Large Concordances have heretofore bin made in the three Languages of Learning, Hebrew on the Old Teſtament, Greek on the New, and Latin on both. Becauſe Latin is now the moſt common Language throughout Chriſtendome, many, as well Papiſts as Proteſtants (as Hugo Cardinalis, Alberſtadius, Franſc. Luca, Pellicanus, Bullocus, and others) have laboured in this ſoile. But among others, the Stephens, Robert and Henry, have gone beyond all in skill and paines; inſomuch as their Concordances, eſpecially the laſt of Henry Stephen, juſtly beare this Title, Maximæ & abſolutiſſimæ Concordantiæ, The largeſt and perfecteſt Concordances. Robert Stephen the father moſt diligently ſearched out all the words of holy Scripture in the common Latin tranſlation, and ſet them downe in an Alphabeticall order, more fully then ever before: Henry Stephen the ſon hath accurately diſtinguiſhed words of divers ſignifications, and ſo compoſed them under their diſtinct heads; a great help, at leaſt to young Students in Divinity. Such hath the profit of Concordances been found to be, as they have been compoſed in ſundry other Languages. There have been many yeers ſince, Engliſh Indexes of proper Hebrew and Greek names, with their ſignifications, and Tables of the principall points contained in the Bible; and ſome ſo large, as they carry the Title of Concordances; (amongſt which, the brief Concordance lately collected by M. John Downham, Batchelor in Divinity, and allowed by Authority to be bound with the Bible in all Volumes, may well deſerve the precedency:) yet have they come ſhort of the uſe of perfect Concordances, which is to point out, not principall points onely, but every particular point in holy Scripture. By a perfect Concordance, if thou remembreſt but one word of a ſentence which thou deſireſt to know, thou mayeſt be directed to find out the whole ſentence, and the place where it is; that ſo, not by the bare words, but by the dependance of them, thou mayeſt find out the true ſenſe. By a perfect Concordance thou mayeſt know what words and phraſes are rarely, what frequently uſed, yea, how oft any word is uſed; a point wherein the Jewes were very skilfull. By a perfect Concordance, thou mayeſt ſoon find out proofes for every principle of Chriſtian Religion, and ſo have thy faith the more firmly ſettled thereon. By a perfect Concordance, thou mayeſt ſoon diſcerne what points the holy Ghoſt moſt urgeth and inculcateth: and thereupon what are moſt diligently to be obſerved, and moſt carefully to be heeded by thee. By a perfect Concordance ſome ſupply may be made of mens too much negligence in reading the Scripture, and of their ignorance following thereon. Many other commodities of good Concordances might be added to theſe, wherein they much excell all Indexes, Tables, Common-places, Epitomes, Abbreviaries, and ſuch other meaner helps, for finding out the golden mines of the Scripture.

Hereby

To the READER.

Hereby judge what a treaſure our Engliſh Church wanted, till CLEMENT COTTON (a lay-man, but a man of great underſtanding, skilfull in the French and Italian, though not in the three learned languages, and of unwearied induſtry) undertooke to compile an Engliſh Concordance*, which hee performed by degrees. He made his firſt aſſay in the yeer 1622. on the New Teſtament, according to the Engliſh Tranſlation begun at* Geneva, in Queen Maries dayes, by ſuch learned Divines as there found great entertainment: And in the yeer 1627. he added thereunto a Concordance on the Old Teſtament, according to the laſt and beſt Engliſh Tranſlation. But obſerving how inconvenient it was, that one part of his Concordance ſhould be of one Tranſlation, the other of another; like the Beare, hee ſtill continued to lick over his workes: and in the yeere 1631. publiſhed A complete Concordance of the whole Bible, according to the foreſaid laſt Tranſlation. And becauſe the Apocrypha was uſually bound up with our Engliſh Bibles, he reviewed and enlarged his former labours, and added thereto a Concordance of the foreſaid Bookes ſtiled Apocrypha, that is, hid, or ſecret, or concealed, becauſe much doubt was made of them: For the Originall of them was concealed, not manifeſted to the Fathers, from whom the authority of the true Scripture came, even to us, by a moſt certaine and knowne ſucceſſion. Therefore they were not produced to confirme the truth of Doctrine, or Articles of Faith; but ſuffered to be publickly read for ſome edification of the people. Truly the aforeſaid Concordances have in their times been very uſefull; but I muſt confeſſe, that by that little uſe which I have made of them, I have failed of ſundry particulars which I have ſearched after, and that in the beſt of them. Beſides, ſundry words which are very frequently uſed in Scripture, (as God, Lord, Man, Name, &c.) being ſet downe without diſtinction, prove very tedious to ſearchers after them. Fitly therefore and ſeaſonably is this Concordance now publiſhed, which is fuller, and every way better then any that before it was publiſhed in Engliſh. For as it maketh a ſupply of ſuch Words and Sentences as were defective in former Concordances, ſo by referring words before quoted in a ſentence, to that part of the Alphabet where the firſt letter was noted, tedious and unneceſſary Tautologies are avoided. For inſtance, All the texts that joyne Moſes with Aaron, are left out in MOS, becauſe they are referred to Aaron with Moſes in AAR. Words alſo of different phraſes have their diſtinct heads: As, Of Aaron, To Aaron, Upon Aaron, and ſo in other words. Theſe diſtinctions are a ſingular help for the more ready finding out a Sentence, where the principall word is very oft uſed. Read D^{r}. Featlies advertiſement concerning this Concordance, and thou ſhalt obſerve, that, in many more particulars, it is more uſefull and helpfull then any other. In which reſpect we have great cauſe to bleſſe God for affording to his Church better and better helps, and anſwerably wee ought to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.
